

Power to the People

Do you or someone you know rely on electrically operated life support system?

The Board of Selectmen with the Emergency Management Director is compiling a list of Orange residents, young and old, who depend upon electrically operated apparatus. The goal is to be able to contact residents quickly in the event of an emergency. A warning call and then a visit to the home would be in order should a storm cause long periods of power outages. A potential solution would be to transport people to shelters where generators would sustain any necessary machines. Knowing who to call and acting quickly could save a life.
